Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart ↪
New York City, New York

PRESENTED BY THE JUNIOR CLASS

Dedication

We dedicate this year's Tower to the memory of Mother * Grace Dammann. Our constant aim has been to reflect in these pages her legacy—Manhattanville as she envisioned a Catholic College for women.

These Our Leaders

IN this first year of peace these our leaders faced no easy task. Yet through the economic crises that affected our college life, through the outburst of postwar gaiety that often made us chafe under regulations, their stability and equanimity held us firmly. To them belongs the talent of exerting authority winningly and with understanding. "The Pats'" leadership had an effervescence that swept over bounds of office right into our hearts, lending a novel touch to college functions, cresting routine with healthy laughter. As individuals, our officers and Council lent friendliness and enthusiasm to groups, as Student Government, they gave a fervid idealism. They made the year an inspiration and a pleasure.

Patricia Norton, Vice-Pres.

Senior Class

IN our graduating class we have found a leadership that stimulated with its flair for the novel way of achieving an aim. Their wholeness was a panorama imprinted with diverse talents, touched with whimsicalities; their abilities were given free rein by quick enthusiasms, and the madcap humor that flavored their undertakings swept all of us into their gay approach to the things of everyday. When we add our own particular stories to the traditional fund of undergraduate merriment, '46 provides material.

There was that swimming party that first welcomed us to Manhattanville—a rollicking splash among formal teas. That same year we watched in mournful anticipation while the class parried with English Lit. Dreaded junior philosophy was just to their taste though, and '46 stands unchallenged as "the most metaphysical class in the college."

Senior year was the final burst of a skyrocket's glory after a bright but even rise. Outstanding powers were to the fore now, and they were set to best advantage in a broad and solid back-

COLLEGE SONG

On the heights so proudly standing
Strong against the blue,

High towers gleam commanding,
Loyal hearts beat true!

For Manhattanville sing proudly
Swell the mighty song!

'Til the echoes ring out loudly
All the ages long.

Words by Lauretta Bremner '29

ground of executive ability. Who could have matched Carrie's management of the tremendous Bridge-Tea? Or Betty Kirby's masterful way of organizing Tea Dances—and then being the most gracious partner at them? Or Charlotte's untiring efforts in behalf of any project that appealed in the name of Catholic Action?

When we realize that successors are expected from our numbers, we are unashamedly hesitant. It is a bold literary piece that would brush shoulder's with Pat Norton's pen-pieces, and Stan, Betty and Sid have left the Little Theater haunted with echoes of powerful applause. Black and White Magic can rest secure on the plane of ingenuity and artistic perfection it attained, but we like to remember the Barn Dance as the gay, different evening of fun that harmonized so perfectly with the casual savoir-faire of this class.

Forty-six has meant very much to us, but we can never mention the class merely by a graduating date. We must always pass quickly to very individual memories of each single member and there we will linger through years to come.

SENIOR SONG

It's the loyalty of spirit,
The unity of heart,
The one for all, the all for one
That makes us each a part Of Manhattanville! Manhattanville!
Our lips will spread your fame!
And the class of '46 will never
Ever forget your name!
And the class of '46 will never
Ever forget your name!

Words and Music by Kathleen Ball

We've got all New York for to roam in

Best of all

I want to sing of Manhattanville

We've a great cool lawn
on our hilltop

We've a fair blue view to the sea

Jeanne Ellen Alger

E. de M.

Jeanne Ellen stepped into Patty's shoes as head of the English Club and carried on the Alger tradition with distinction. Though her arrival at Manhattanville was delayed till sophomore year, she more than caught up with her class. It seemed she gave her "all" to the Tower last year, but there was always enough spirit left to lead the English Club and add to the Essay. We were completely awed by her amazing bridge skill, but Jeanne Ellen herself never would let us remain in awe for long. She was too much one of us, and there will be a special dash of personality missing from our gatherings when she leaves.

Gloria Alvarez

A quick smile and mischievously laughing eyes lead us to expect the unexpected from Gloria. We could be sure of a fundamental kindness and logic in her actions, but beyond that everything she did was surprising. Her fastidious, chic style marked her as French, and the extra lilt in her perfect English added a tang to every word. There is an extension of ordinary graciousness that echoes the heritage of elaborate chivalry and age-old customs. This, together with her ever-different turn of mind, has given her a steadily-widening circle of friends. Her full happiness has an inherent principle that allows only of increase.

Norma Marie Armstrong

E. de M.

Norma's stack of books and papers is often taller than she is, but nothing exists that could overshadow her definitely "sunny side up" disposition. Her smile is about 1000 watt brightness, and that twinkle in her eye is rampantly infectious. Her undertakings form in clusters, one important center and countless satellites. Last year it was editing the Tower, this year it is steering the Criticism Unit, and all along there have been debates, class games, and an assortment of "for the moment" activities. The role of the college's solitary economics major was a difficult one, but here is the girl who persevered in it. Norma's combination of stability and frivolity is a thoroughly substantial blend.

A haunting voice, strains full of pathos—it's Kathy singing. We surround her, for her song weaves always a spell of enchantment. The qualities of her melody mingle in Kathy's personality. She is provocative and tender. Beneath an appearance as fragile as dresden lies the strength and verity that give body to her song and to her living. A merry chanteuse and an actress withal, Kathy never ceased to delight us with those perfect imitations. She has a literary bent too and brought her music to poetry and essay. Plaintive yet gay, the echoes of her voice will long linger with us.

Anne Barnes

E. de M.

Anne is definitely attuned to the times with her thesis on the Atomic Age. It was her calmer manner though, which smoothed out the discordant notes from everything, and kept her in tune with the college. Come exams or papers or a tense bridge game, and Anne's composure would carry on through all. A ready wit parried any thrust of teasing in her direction, but the humor of it only encouraged antagonists the more. She was equally skilled on hockey field and in math territory. Day Hop's Lounge missed her regular presence this year, but Founder's welcomed her transfer. Anne's is the power of personality that creates acute awareness of her presence with no word being spoken—but with only that casual wave of her hand.

Rosmarie Berger

E. de M.

No offense to St. Jude, but Rosmarie is our patron saint of the impossible. Not only can she herself do the incredible, but with infinite charm she will persuade you to do it too. The manner in which she mastered the English language so that now no one will believe that she is Austrian-born, is only an example of her power. How, by her utter conviction, she has carried us along in the Missions, is another. Rosmarie's dignity never deserts her. Added to these is an adaptability that allows no compromise with principles. Philosophy and the Liturgy may be her special interests, but from experience we know that everything that is life touches her.

Mary Lamphier Brady

E. de M.

For Lam, time is only relative. Who of us has not walked down the hall without being stopped by her with a desperate plea for prayers and advice on any one of her six overdue papers? Yet, when they do come in, they always merit an A. Intensity and Lam are interchangeable terms, whether it applies to acceleration, getting ads for the Tower and the Essay, or living the liturgy she loves. The Missions thrive on her earnestness in collecting dues, for in nothing can we resist the appeal in her eyes. Both '46 and '47 will miss accounts of gay holidays spent in Baltimore, but most of all we will miss our own Lamphier.

Frances Brancati

Just let any tune be whistled or hummed, and there is Frankie, singing it with Latin vigour and rhythm. Tiny, but with enough energy for six people, she is always overflowing with merry laughter. This invaluable gift when added to a genuine interest in people and a warm sympathy for their troubles, makes her the best friend anyone could have. The latest song, the newest story—Frankie has them all at her fingertips. That “uno dos y tres” chant of hers has become very nearly as famous as the tobacco auctioneer’s—and it has the same power of insisting that hearers laugh. Frankie just can’t resist music, and she’s sure to go through life in tune with everything about her.

Madeline Shriver Brennan

E. de M.

We were all "watchbirds" watching Madge Brennan, and how we enjoyed it! We won't soon forget her knee-length socks, "Otto," or her forever-young humor. English was her field, and she played it well—short stories, essays, and even a one-act play flowed from her busy pen. But Madge's eyebrows and quixotic humor reminded us most of a slightly subdued Puck—laughing through life and making others laugh, sometimes at a "perfectly awful" pun, more often at a clever, unexpected comment on "What's What." We wish she could stay longer to teach us how to smile as appealingly as she does.

Jane Callahan

E. de M.

Jane has perfected the little-girl recipe of "sugar, spice and all things nice." She is sweet with a tang. Friendship is her particular talent, and the warning signal is a neighborly smile. A certain mix-ability is characteristic. There is a spontaneous liking between Jane and people, but the first appeal always matures into a long-term policy. She has a flair for hilarity and can match wits with the best. Although from that section where no one admits the existence of an "r," she has compromised with her teasers to the extent of pronouncing some few words with an r-r-r a Scot would be proud of. It's like her to be one with her companions—and ever herself.

If Jack Armstrong wanted to find the All-American girl, we are sure he would pick Kitty—no one can surpass her for those typical American virtues—open friendliness, breezy humor, utter likeability, a sometimes startling depth of mind. Always “on the go,” Kitty could crowd more college activity into a dayhop’s day than eight boarders—and still have time for fun. Many of her priceless remarks will go down in the annals of English Club, Essay and Welfare. Many more will go on in the memories of her numerous friends—both those who leave with her and those she has left behind.

Mary Carr

E. de M.

"Is Carr-ie there?"—the familiar cry rings over the campus. Carr-ie is indispensable when it comes to an extra goal on the Varsity or class hockey teams or a bright "Felicidades" on Mother O'Byrne's feast. An industrious worker, yet she never misses a good time. Ever experience a dull moment when Carr-ie was in the crowd? Hardly, for her droll smile and subtle humor are always present. Vitality is as much a part of Mary as Mary is of '46. A reliable leader, her nickname "Star" is most appropriate, because she looks skyward for her ideals. "Where there is darkness Carrie sows light and where there is sadness, joy."

E. de M.

Sue has definite press agent abilities, but they are reserved for special subjects. Manhattanville was her great interest, and from the moment of her delayed arrival she seemed dedicated to developing our ordinarily warm enthusiasm to the white-heat of her own. No coach in the between-halves pep talk ever fired a team as Sue fired the Chicago freshman to a preview college spirit. On campus, stray individuals were knit into compact, animated groups by the Cavanagh touch on the piano. Her loyalty has stood tests of exacting service—as Junior Representative on Rehabilitation and on the Usher Committee. We will miss the bed-rock dependability and the in-the-clouds zeal of Sue.

Betty Louise Chene

E. de M.

That afternoon at an N.C.C.S. dance, when Betty wasn't quite sure what the Dutch marines were saying, was the first and last time we saw her perplexed. Clarity and order organize all her activities. She spent her executive ability on the Essay and Calendar Committee, but that precise efficiency never stunted her creative work. Dr. Walsh's life was made happier by those polished short stories and essays. The same sympathy which was evident in writings and personal contacts gave the Dramatic Club an invaluable member who could project herself into any type of character, from stern old men to the dreamy poet of Samarkand. There is a swiftness about her mind that darts to the heart of a subject and evaluates basic worth immediately. Manhattanville is proud to have Betty as a representative alumna.

Aesop's fables, Einstein's theories, and Plato's dialogues have all found a ready commentator in Elaine, whose conversational ability ranges from politics to astronomy. Who has not heard her theory of the two moons? Yet she has as easy a command of a hockey stick as of startling, involved theories. Ideas and action are closely bound to each other in her outlook, and the college marveled at the practical realizations of her soaring visions. Behind the scenes of any dramatic production or in the limelight with daring aquatic feats, Elaine's cooperation and ardent enthusiasm have always been largely responsible for the success of the total undertaking.

Music and Marge go together like Palestrina and Polyphony. Her range of talent extends from improvising a tune on a tuba to modulating a mode in Gregorian and at a moment's notice, arranging for an upstate New York benefit. However, there is nothing of the longhaired introvert about her. She takes an interest in everything on the campus, and her spirit is as lively as her fingers on a keyboard, as limitless as her repertoire. Marge is to be found listening intelligently at lectures, rooting enthusiastically at class games, or relaxing companionably at Doc's. She makes us think of music because her gifts include not only the practical abilities for it, but also the sparkle and power of great compositions.

Sid is the mysterious lady of the masque who expresses herself easily and yet always retains a hint of depths yet unrevealed. Here is the Mrs. Malaprop of magnificent gesture, the blue-jeaned director of dramatic triumphs, the writer who stumbled at deadlines and then walked off with literary laurels the minute after. Enigmatic at times, she completely charmed us with a provocative nonchalance and comical comments on her own actions. Affection, sincere and deep to fit the person, is Manhattanville's tribute to Sid.

Whether it be an unfinished thesis or going to the "flicks" during exam week, for Mary Lou it is all "good for laughs." Her humor has made life easier from Arcadia over to Founder's Hall, and we often wondered if the word "casual" were coined just for her. Last year we were the gainers when she was one of the Juniors left in the Main Building. Then we found her unharrassed, unhurried manner was an integral part of her outlook which accepts the world as it is, with quite a few things in its favor and no point in worrying about its faults. She herself added much to the general fund of goodness. It wasn't hard to like Mary Lou—it will be so easy to miss her.

Nancy has a full measure of the natural loveliness that so perfectly complements fluent grace and an unlimited capacity for making friends. She is ideally American. That keen alertness and easy control which were so evident on the hockey field became a subdued, vital charm at formal teas. Her practical abilities were soon discovered and committees sought the aid of such solid business ability. It was her talent that, after efficiently balancing Tea Dance accounts, she could become the very feminine person so welcome in the Blue Room. She was the dependable manager responsible for preliminary arrangements and also the one who added sparkle to good times. An unreserved gift of herself is the basis of both. We will remember Nancy as gay and gracious in being completely unselfish.

Does Gen believe in fairies? We always thought so, and when she confided that her thesis was about the transcendentals in Fairy Literature, we became quite convinced. A sly, mischievous grin warns us of her latest caprice; a gentle voice and even gentler laughter hints at a world she alone has fully captured. It was typical of her to spend long afternoons along Riverside Drive, keeping company with her beloved ships. Hard-earned stripes on a well-faded Nurse's Aide uniform testify to how thoroughly practical she can be when there is need. February and an early farewell came all too soon for us.

Connie has that happy faculty of taking things as they come. Nothing catches her off balance while that enviable composure lasts and lasts with no sign of fraying under stress. She is inevitably casual, quietly friendly and has a keen sense for the ridiculous which prompts matchless dry remarks on every current happening. Her interests have an artistic turn. Those lovely paintings won our unrestrained praise, and the same power over style and color made her our campus portrait of artistry in clothes. A natural fondness for mischief combined with photographic skill made her delight in snapping us unawares. Connie's gentle manner was to us the loveliest of her artistic achievements.

The glow and sparkle of Peggy's diamond seem caught from the very personality of the wearer. Serenity and flashing highlights characterize both. There is a superb control in the way Peggy shielded her steady calm from all disturbing attacks of heavy assignments; acceleration never raced her patience beyond safe limits, yet she has an antipathy for routine. When monotony threatens, she flares into innovations, be they ever so minor as a dramatic hairdo on "just another day." Fiery at times, a stabilizing influence at others, she remains mistress of her enthusiasms. Hers is fourteen carat quality.

Walking in her quiet dignity, Betty has impressed us all with her poise and grace. Always impeccably dressed with her dark hair shining, she has been the envy of all, especially with that ring, third finger, left hand. Yet beneath the smooth sophisticated surface, there is a heart whose warmth many have felt. It is this same spirit of kindness that prompts her to go often to the hospital as a Nurse's Aide—to do those "little things" that are invaluable. Added to all this is the spark of genuine humor that comes to the fore in her unexpected laughter. These things have endeared her to us as well as to her favorite topic of discussion. Congratulations, Bill!

Winifred Joan Farrell

E. de M.

Fred, as she was dubbed at Manhattanville, is a jack-of-all-trades. Athletics found her a skillful tennis player, and Dramatics used her talent to advantage. Light-hearted and popular, she was always willing to take time off to be a fourth for bridge, or assist at Knickerbocker. She spoke enthusiastically of those summer months in the Adirondacks, and it often seemed she had caught the freshness and clarity of mountain lakes in her own personality. We hope Fred will not desert her favorite I R T from Riverdale, but rather will be an alumna-commuter who comes to see us often.

Eileen Fitzgerald

E. de M.

The Irish have a charm all their own and Eileen is as Irish as her name. We would not have it otherwise, for her quick flow of ideas and vivid expressions fascinate us. Easily versatile, she has been a literary power since arrival—English Club, Tower, and assorted entertainments all knew her talents. She can provoke hilarious laughter one minute and startle professors with momentous questions the next, while her Irish humor is always in evidence. With goodbye, we forfeit a keen mind in which humor and depth of thought balanced perfectly. The world beyond college has gained.

Mil must have some extraordinary power over time and space, for material limitations never seem to hamper her. As she covers more ground and does more things, her every action becomes less ruffled. She used a perfect sense of timing to fit many things into her days, Catholic Action, trips to the Biltmore, and afternoons at the "flicks," while cars she drove were made to substitute for Seven League Boots. A wealth of energy and enthusiasm went into starting an Interracial Study Club in her home city, and still there was "change" left for cheering Notre Dame on every possible occasion. In rare idle moments she likes nothing better than to eat ice cream by the pint and dream of seeing India. Good luck to the mercurial Mil in whatever comes her way.

Ruthie is as full of the honest enjoyment of living as Christmas is replete with gifts. She is like the holiday season too—merry as a Santa Claus handing out his presents, appealing as a child receiving wondrous things. Exuberance seems to tumble from her into every activity. We loved to watch her on the tennis courts and in her struggles with short stories. There was the same extravagant expenditure of self on both, and the literary efforts provoked almost as much physical action as the fast match did. There is joy in Ruthie to be spread everywhere, for she has a happy holiday spirit in her heart.

Jean is a rare being, a girl who is entirely feminine with no trace of coyness. She is staunch and straight, her appearance like an external sign that there is truth and sincerity beneath, in all she says and does. Serenity mirrors a character built on strong faith, and they became her well as a Council member of the Children of Mary. Her time was carefully distributed among Math problems, Catholic Action, and tennis squad so that none suffered an unfair allotment. We thrilled to her easy grace and strong strokes on the tennis court, and we found she lived as she played.

E. de M.

To our knowledge Margot is the world's most perfect lady. There is refinement in her slightest motion, in her every word. We like to think of the sweet sincerity of her appeal for Nurses' Aides and of the many times she went herself. Her unpretentious efficiency enabled her to get work done ahead of time, so she might spend the dividend on being sociable or "filling in" at Knickerbocker. When Margot goes, the college loses a soft tone, a gentleness that will be hard to replace, but her superabundant graciousness has already flooded our hearts.

Marbie combines daintiness and stately dignity as her native state blends fragile blossoms with rocky cliffs. Even a first impression makes note of both, and if she is accepted as representative, Denver must be acknowledged as the fashion centre of the world. More provincial souls stood in profound admiration of her regional major, which reached beyond Spanish history to include the language, yet Marbie took it in stride. Her personality was the tranquil motif around which the crescendos of Grey Alley life exploded, and Founder's was happier for her presence. We return Marbie to the West with many thanks for lending her to us.

We are proud of Margaret as our "representative abroad," but sometimes we have a grudge against Medical School for monopolizing her. It was good to have her as one of us, for near her there can be no discomfort, no reserve. Groups kept on an even keel of steady friendliness under her influence. Margaret is a casual master of many things—amazing marks, humor that delights and an offhanded coaxing of wondrous tones from a piano. Her meteoric course through college blazed a path to Medical School and the honor of being one of its youngest students. All the Doctors Hayes in one family is a little bewildering though! We will keep a collection of queer symptoms in reserve to assure us of Margaret's company in years to come.

Gene is capable, efficient, eager to attend to the business at hand. Yet approach her with "Have you heard the latest?" and when you finish "enlightening" her, she has supplied the details of the story and told you something even later. There's a mutual laugh that invariably follows such an episode. It was good to have such a person around at any time, but that buoyant air was even more appreciated after tiring sessions in the chem lab. Long experiments never seemed to dull Gene's outlook; it remained as bright as her hair. She could take pleasure in singing at any time, and had the ability to turn a heavy thesis to such a light subject as Perfume. When Gene's successes make news we will have fun asking everyone "Have you heard the latest?"

Ruth has been a full, four-year favorite at Manhattanville with "Heide-ho" hailing the star of basketball and hockey games, the welcome addition to any campus group. Her pride in what she does is contagious so that everyone around her was swept into amazing enthusiasm. Tom Sawyer could not convert others to fence painting as readily as Ruth won us to trying out for teams or losing our voices in an afternoon of cheering; for she honestly enjoyed her duties. Hers is the comprehensive talent of doing well as that she attempts. '46 has gained by the class spirit of this member who expended her devotion through class council. We liked her for fun at times, for her gravity at others, but always we liked the perfect blending that was Ruth herself.

Chris has brought with her the worthwhile heritage of old world tradition. Hers is the respect for personality that does not permit bold display, but rather unfolds itself only gradually in sympathetic company. A breath of America stirs beneath the shy dignity though; she takes delight in little-boyish teasing. The aesthetic sense that responded to the glories of European cathedrals now seeks satisfaction in strange, out-of-the-way sections of New York, and she is happy when long searches bring the reward of a beautiful scarf or graceful vase. We marveled at her easy familiarity with Dante, Goethe and Claudel in the originals, but there were few linguistic barriers to her reading. Chris has fit perfectly into the Manhattanville pattern of progress and tradition.

From Kentucky Betty brought a yen for the races, the inevitable "you all" and much more. With her came the freshness of blue grass and the warmth of southern days. She is as open as the low rolling hills and as gentle as the soft strains of a plantation banjo. To all her activities here she has given wholehearted enthusiasm. A well balanced person, she contributed her bit to Catholic Action, class games, and the Dramatic Club, while never ceasing to brighten the general outlook with merry eyes and a friendly smile. With a drawled comment she tossed a return to our teasing about the old Kentucky homestead. We counted as precious her straightforward, simple expression of a true graciousness.

Catholic Action will miss a loyal supporter next year, and Student Government assemblies will lack that Hopkins humor which whirled us through lists of committee meetings. Vin is the sort of a person who will always seem at home whenever she returns to Manhattanville, for she just eases into the situation at the moment. Betty likes everyone and by the same token, everyone likes Betty. She enjoys a quiet popularity that will not lessen with time because it springs from her own goodness of person. Many's the time we have come upon her packing boxes for the Relief Committee or dreaming up new ideas to make Tea Dances more successful. Her home city, too, has seen her selfless nature and the skill of her hand; those Boston Dances will long be remembered as a tribute to her ability. However, the many friends she leaves behind her at Manhattanville are an even greater tribute.

Joan Ita Brigid Hurley

E. de M.

The frolicking caper, the husky voice, the resonant laugh, it's our madcap Joan. Full-hearted, made for fun, she lent a touch of Pagliacci to the campus. Her passionate selflessness found her playing and painting for Recreational or drying dishes for Father Delaney on Sunday afternoons. A girl with hair in braids and boots in hand, she diverted us on gray demerit afternoons and lifted our spirits from deeper troubles. We liked the open regard that prompted litanies of Danny Walsh's praises over hot chocolate in the tea room. Joan is plucky, understanding, and true to the core. Hers is the richness of person that grows greater in giving.

Mamie Louise Jenkins

E. de M.

"We want Mamie" has become almost a theme cry at picnics, parties or just casual gatherings. Thundering applause and pleas for encores echo after her concerts. Something more than exceptional musical talent makes this girl very special and Manhattanville has discovered the fact. Mamie touched the spirit of the student body, loved it and became absorbed in it. Her devotion to her college was an extraordinary one and to express it, she gave herself in a total manner. There was a shy, friendly smile for everyone on the campus and an unassuming eagerness to spend her talents. There was a candid enthusiasm for friends and their activities. In return there was a complete unrestrained enthusiasm for Mamie.

Barbara masters a phenomenal combination of things. We have seen her write a thesis in poetry, solve the daily crossword puzzle, play an intricate bridge hand, and chalk up innumerable hours at Knickerbocker with no hint of tension. She directed the Poetry Unit of the English Club while her verse gave beauty to Feast Wish presentations. Everything she does is characterized by complete naturalness, for Barbara was one of those outstandingly generous people. Hers is a friendly, unpretentious manner. We could not help but be impressed by her ability and personality, though the desire to impress was utterly alien to her nature.

Mary Lou came to Manhattanville in sophomore year and quickly became an integral part of the college. Her rich laughter and authoritative discussions on history made a place for her in tea room and gym groups. Where matters of importance were concerned, she used an unrelenting determination and followed a course of action to its end. Second Floor Founder's made her the social secretary of the corridor since her room was so convenient to the phone. We all thoroughly enjoyed those sessions of practice Spanish with Mary Lou and a Latin group, but bridge games did become rather confusing when the two hobbies tried to get together. Utica and its younger generation are lucky to have this twentieth century version of the feminine pedagogue.

One of our most zealous workers in Catholic Action is Peggy. She daily dashes from the Bronx to the Chemistry lab, yet still finds time for interracial and catechetical activities. Chemical work in textiles is her special interest, but although it takes up much of her time, there's always a minute for a quiet laugh and good fellowship. Then the conversation is likely to turn to Maine, the state which has won her enthusiasm during summer vacations. Back in the lab Peggy concentrates with careful industry. Meticulous and neat about everything, she leaves an impression of finished quality. Her talent for ordering many things well has been valuable, but it is Peggy's consistent preference for the finer ways of acting that is precious.

How often we could find her pounding away on her typewriter, quickly turning out another original piece of writing. How often we found her willing to play a game of bridge or to lend a hand to any urgent project. How often we saw her deep in enthusiastic discussions, her pleasant laugh ringing out frequently in testimony of her grand sense of humor.

A certain chair in the reading room will soon miss its faithful occupant and the Brady Memorial Library loses its most appreciative member. Alicia is a real student—with a good sense of values and a great deal of depth. Manhattanville has been called the "singing" college because of such people as Mary Kay. Not content with a full academic schedule of music, she takes bits of Gregorian and excerpts from the Hit Parade over to Founder's with her and the corridors are more cheerful with the echoes she awakes. Hers is a light-hearted spirit undertoned with chords of strength and sincerity. She strikes just the right tone in conversation, a blend of amusing chatter and contented listening. West Point shared our eagerness for her company, and Mary Kay had to divide weekends between us. Loving and lovable, generous and joyful, she gave Manhattanville a singing heart.

When tact was considered a god-like trait, people would have decided Peggy came straight from Olympus. That gift of always saying the nicest thing in the nicest way meant much to us, but its possessor could never be associated with cloud-topped realms. She was so very friendly, so much inclined to spend herself on every activity. Balancing her leisurely grace was a conscientious regard for perfection and order in everything. The blend was beautiful to see in her concerts, the sharp purity of her tones against that easy bearing. With necessary gender changes, Newman has given our definition of Peggy, a gentlewoman.

Betty is one who never surprises with her fine excess of everything we like. We have come to expect superior quality from this girl with the good old-fashioned chuckle and the gift for management. Tea Dances caught some Kirby sparkle through her expert touches on every phase of the arrangements, and the same personal formula used on class teams led them to victory. There is more of the steady artist in Betty than of the challenging pioneer. Others may disrupt and overturn while she smoothes and perfects. The sphere she chooses as her own will become a clearly-defined one with a finished beauty. It is the more womanly way, the way that Betty does everything.

This staunch Bostonian has a talent for being a formative power behind every enterprise while never appearing obvious in her help. Dramatic Club depended on her practical skills, and no one will soon forget her long struggle through the subways last year with the saw horses for the Road To Samarkand. The magnificent scenery of that production was high tribute to her achievements. When this year came around, there could be no question of who should head the Technical Group. While she accomplishes her wonders though, Polly retains a sprightly humor that rejoices in a pun. Very strong-minded, she can state and hold to her opinions without antagonizing hearers. Many friends respect her for allegiance to principles and love her for the consideration with which she tempers their assertion.

Katherine Anne Kuestich

Life is the word for Katherine or to elaborate, life and laughter. Modeling and perusing the New Yorker are her pastimes, while work becomes a pleasure for one possessed of such talent. She has a literary gift that goes with a capacity for steady effort, and the combination is good-omened. There is a liking for the bizarre about this cosmopolite. Maybe that is responsible for the large group of fascinating people who are her friends, but more likely her popularity is due to that never-disturbed disposition. Even those jaunts to and from Jersey could not upset her equilibrium. Katherine has always been interesting; her future is sure to be so.

Barbara Mary Lux

E. de M.

Our campus dynamo is one of those awe-inspiring people who truly enjoy math. She made herself completely at home with calculus problems by taking them to cozy window-seats along with a supply of apples, and then, figuring and munching, she solved them. Catholic Action took her away to head the Financial Committee, while the Tea Dance Committee counted on her extra minutes. Tennis found an ardent enthusiast in her, and class teams were stronger for her playing. Between busy hours there was the moment of relaxation with coffee and English muffins in the tea room. Holidays were equally well-stocked with many things—brisk ski trips in winter and long summer hours of Nurses' Aide in an Army hospital. Bobbie mastered the dreary atmosphere of Our Town perfectly, but offstage her friendliness and gaiety were what made her ever-welcome.

E. de M.

MacEach is one of the few people we like to have around under all circumstances. Everyone is immediately aware of her genuine interest in those about her, and popular response establishes mutual friendliness. She could hold the Debate Club with her discussions of obscure topics as well as momentous problems, and then use post-adjournment minutes to write poignant short stories. Duffy has long been a particular pet of ours. Always a little bit above ground level, she is given to last minute arrivals, apologetic, and out of breath. MacEach's personality invariably establishes and preserves amicable relations with the world in general.

Captivating little things about Sis always come as clues to an intricate personality for there is nothing obvious about her qualities. Sometimes a letter from her is the first revelation of just how vivid and rambling an imagination she hides behind that every day realism. Still, even in the most practical days, Sis has a streak of originality—whether it be jotting down hit songs in shorthand or spending free time on eulogies of that very superior pet dog, Susie. Psychology is her field, and just the right sort of temperament goes with her liking for it. There is a complete competence to deal with any situation and a strong sense of balance that seems to obviate difficulties.

Whenever people get to speculating about a woman president, we always want to make a campaign speech for Dolly. Here is executive ability par excellence. Hockey teas, Girl Scout programs, and liturgical activities all went through her hands and emerged as well-organized affairs with a finishing polish added to each. Through it all, she always had time for the relaxed minute—long, hearty laughs at dinner and unhurried talks on a window-seat. We will remember her as the capable person who climbed ladders and crawled around scenery in the Little Theatre, helping Father Donnelly with the lights, and who, a few minutes later was the fragile heroine of the play. That's typical of Dolly who can do two men's jobs and remain completely feminine.

When Betsy spoke about the ins and outs of the financial committee at assemblies, we could not help grinning; her eager smile is so contagious, her manner so spontaneous. She is completely natural, entirely sincere, and very lively in an unobtrusive way. We have found a wealth of humor in this girl. She loves a joke, even the most awful pun, but there is also a very earnest side. Many winter afternoons have seen her struggling in the lab. and her trustworthiness prompted everyone to depend on her for the difficult and thankless tasks. Best of all, Betsy's good companionship has made the past four years brighter.

Heather-blue eyes, delicate coloring, willowy grace and shadow-like changes of expression make everyone want to turn artistic and use Eileen as a subject. Her beneath the surface qualities are of the sturdy variety however; she is earnest, loyal and completely straightforward. That clear, practical mind translated an enthusiasm for chemistry into a deft mastery of the subject, but somehow the detailed organization of her experiments never crossed to her social life. Eileen always had too many dates at the same time, for it was difficult to satisfy the demand for her company. As surely as she penetrated to the heart of difficult subjects, she has penetrated to the heart of Manhattanville.

Monnie is tiny against her background of giant trees, but we expect big things of her. With a Western candidness she let us know her simply as she is—strong in holding to principles and alert in acting upon them. Her days were packed like an overseas box—a bulky schedule to almost fill the space, but with corners left for extra-curricular doings. Choir will miss this president, who with cropped hair and serene expression secretly reminded us of a Christmas card choir boy. The future will be brighter if East and West occasionally meet so that we hear again Monnie's "Hi"—with the warmth and gaiety that goes with it.

Anne is a special unifying bond in the senior class, for boarders and dayhops both have enjoyed her among them. There is a loveliness in her first shyness that grows to quiet companionship and then full friendship. Her brothers are favorite topics of conversation, and listeners rarely show any hints of boredom. Though math and physics have a faculty for demanding time, Anne has kept them beautifully in order while indulging her fondness for playing hostess on free days. Invitations from her were guarantees of enjoyment. May the Mount Vernon express run often to New York in the future.

Maybe there is something to those Celtic myths of beings from a mysterious land who make the earth their playground—or maybe Peter has just been trying to make us believe there is. She has swirling mystery in her eyes and bubbling mischief in her laugh. There is impish fun in her that pokes itself into the most serious moods. In the midst of a penetrating analysis of the Battle of the Marne or a quick survey of the Crimean War, the corners of her mouth turn up and a quick splash of laughter follows. We never tired of her gaiety because there was a chameleon quality about it that was ever-varying, ever-attractive.

A tiny sprite of industry and amusement, Conchita gave us the gay side of Puerto Rico. We loved to hear that great laugh springing from such a diminutive person: it added a tang to Spanish Carols and was deliciously incongruous amid the gravity of Social Studies labs. She has quick, exuberant ways that seem to be always in tune with clicking castanets, but beneath these lies a seriousness of purpose that has already indicated post graduate work for next year. We often wished we knew Spanish so we could have long discussions with Conchita in her native tongue, but her own attractive compromise—English has been more than enough to let us appreciate an alert, idealistic person.

Beauty and brains clasp hands with perfect accord in Lourdes. That majestic Latin loveliness was the pleasing mask for an acute scientific mind. The mask was readily transparent though, for her keen intelligence shone through it in every Biology or Chemistry lab session. "It's really fun," insists Charlotte whether she be gathering recruits to paint Friendship House or collecting catechism teachers for Casita Maria. Our Catholic Action head is adept at making the difficult task seem a pleasure. With Blessed Martin, she could even achieve the miracle of the Interracial concert. Not only could she impress us with the necessity for service, but she could also inspire a love for it. Hers is the vivacious, sincere way that makes a truly winning leader. That immense fund of sociability could never be bound to spare moments, but it was incorporated in her every activity. She had a genius for winning friends as she discharged executive duties to perfection. There will be other leaders at Manhattanville, but we are glad to have been here with Charlotte.

Pat possesses that rare and wonderful combination—deep maturity of mind and the open, eager heart of a child. The former has made her a thoughtful leader of both Children of Mary and class. It has enabled her to direct creative powers to poetry, short story, and stage. But it is surely for the latter that she was most dear and will be longest remembered. We couldn't look at Pat without wanting to talk to her, and we couldn't talk to her without loving her. For she gave an undivided interest and affection to each one of us and put a wonder of enthusiasm into every little action. Pat's is the finishing simplicity that must be seen to be appreciated. There is a wide stripe of the non-conformist and a peppering of unusual theories, but the overall pattern of Betty's personality blended well with Manhattanville traditions. She gave new animation to established customs by touching them with a brisk originality. Lipstickless and in those moccasins she could look like the relaxed collegian of Mademoiselle, never like the rest of us looked when we tried the same methods. Betty has established an all-time low for attendance in the dining room, but tearoom groups approved. Her comments on current events interspersed with dry witticisms were even more vivid against the sleepy atmosphere of twilight, cozy groups and grilled cheese sandwiches. We enjoyed Betty's individualism, but we loved her because it was never identical with selfishness.

Stan is poise and affability personified. She finds her way in any company, under any circumstances, yet there is never any loss of distinctiveness. Hers is a strength of character that speaks out for convictions while completely winning adversaries to the charming person who speaks. From sympathy with the individual, sympathy with the ideas follows more easily, and most people are willing converts to Stan's way of thinking. Her college career has been meteoric—Sophomore honors in Hamlet to Student Chairman of the Mother Dammann Memorial. At present we bow low in tribute to anyone who could guide last year's Tower through perilous financial straits. Post-college days can hold nothing but the best for Stan who "walks steadfast in her ways."

She will argue earnestly on any one of a wide range of subjects, so it is evident that "The discussion's the thing" for Chrystal no matter what it be about. Remnants of southern graciousness have caught in her personality and they whisk us to an atmosphere of grand plantations when she serves tea. Intensity of personality and ardent intellectual curiosity make Mary Ann a stimulating companion. We liked to listen in on her animated conversations, especially those historical arguments which aired her favorite theories. Cross word puzzles challenged the eager mind in relaxed moments, and she would struggle down to the last obscure "Arabian puffin." An avid newspaper reader, she went through every page of every section. Mary Ann studied diligently, but after library hours, her entertaining of the Navy was a most successful maritime project. Her inclination towards tailored clothes highlights her distinctive grace. We loved to see her dashing around in those colorful suits. Their color lent vividness to the campus, as did Mary Ann's personality.

Undisguised affection is a universal response to Pat. Conventional tendencies to camouflage true feelings fall away before such genuine candor. There is an executive streak in her which is only surpassed by an unexpected domestic one. Whether it be working on the financial committee, or writing the inevitable paper, there is a certain finality she puts into things. In class games, or gyrating between gym and tearoom, that determination which so characterizes Pat is always in evidence. She will fight for what she believes in and is a good judge of people, whom she likes and who like her. Honesty with Pat is not a virtue but a very basic part of herself.

Feminine yet vigorous, she expended her energies as head of the A. A., captain of the basketball team, and outstanding player in tennis or hockey. Francoise Richard

E. de M.

Francoise has put a solid basis under Gallic frivolity; retained its lightness and subtracted the superficiality. Result—worthwhile femininity. There is a piquancy here that impels us to laugh with her often. Very levelheaded, she could settle to a task at hand and regulate schedules perfectly while commuting to a New Jersey town whose odd name was a constant source of amusement. Glee Club valued her because of the same lightness and careful perfection that crept into her voice. That novel, foreign air spiced Francoise's personality, but its essence was in the old established qualities—like consideration and generosity.

Julie Ann Schaefer

E. de M.

All of us have heard consideration and womanliness stressed in assembly talks since freshman year. Then we saw the qualities personified in Julie, and we appreciated the compelling appeal of a personality with such charms. Femininity is characteristic of her—seen in little things like a marked inclination towards shopping sprees, Blue Grass, Manhattan tea dances and gracious entertainment. Girl Scouts and Cathedral Canteen were grateful for the total service of complete unselfishness, but Julie's great interest was her friends. She spent herself freely on the extra, unexpected niceties that meant so much. With her own values as criteria, Julie has achieved success, for the love and loyalty of many friends is hers.

Mary Elizabeth Schellings

E. de M.

From the first time Mary was called Skeezix every other name was out of the question. Freshmen days were full of teasing, for who could help but smile at her ever-surprised look, her Peter Pan ways. But now our Skeezix has matured to a stability far beyond the average, and we admire, never from afar, but always with a tender affection. There seems to be some inner spring in her that automatically raises her hand whenever the call comes, "May we have a volunteer?" Its effective operation has brought her in on Sunday mornings to sing High Mass with us, always claiming that it is "really my thesis," and has put her on every tidying up squad after teas. The Skeezix of the little-girl ways is no more, but it is with many precious memories of that loved person that "Skeezix" still remains.

It must have been Nancy who gave ginger ale that sparkling idea. She is merrily effervescent but with a full measure of solid organization beneath. Those exasperating last minute tasks were handled with dispatch and thoroughness while her good nature came through at the end to elaborate on stories of the "little white man down tiger town way." Sympathy that reached straight from her heart touched us with the right word of encouragement, the right attitude of understanding listening. No wonder this Nurses' Aide was a favorite! Everyone delighted in teasing her about that collection of miniature tigers, but it was Nancy's humor that made it such fun.

Our tall, slender Marti made us think of rolling plains, but we soon found she hailed from Wilkes-Barre. A one-woman Chamber of Commerce, she'll expound on the merits of her home-town any place. There is usually a bit of exaggeration in the description, and the slowest grin in the college gives it away. Marti's droll humor always went along to basketball games, Nurses' Aide and Tea Dances—to be much appreciated by whatever company was at large. There is a fluent quality about her—in her walk and speech, in the ease with which a good-natured attitude towards life is transferred to those about her. Wilkes-Barre can be as proud of this enthusiast as she is of Wilkes-Barre—and that removes all limits.

Jane walks along little byways that merge with the general path and remains very much an individual. She will startle wherever she goes, for beneath quiet shyness she hides a wealth of talent greater than most. On English Lit we often vowed she was an authority second only to Miss Cave, while backstage her word was law on props and costumes. Harmonizers in the gym counted on Jane's voice, yet all along we know her mind was bent on sterner stuff. Those flashes of brilliance are surely destined to brighten the varying scenes she enters.

Pat heard Mother Dammann's words "Do the truth in charity," and the spirit of them became vitalized in her lovable personality. We who followed her exalted lead knew the compelling appeal of a personality attuned to a rectitude of mind and will. An incisive power of intellect plunged to the nucleus of truth, and truth was diffused through every sphere of her thinking and acting. Like a force of gravitation, a natural reverence for basic values drew everyone to the reflection of them in Pat—all the while we reveled in the flood of merriment which burst from her in torrents. Laughter began at her toes and surged over any group's affections. "Staunch" is Pat's adjective, for hers was a splendor of will dauntless before obstacles. There was relaxation though in the determination, and a harlequin's instinct that made her such an amusing actress. France D'Abord and The Taming of the Shrew are gay memories—pressed away with rousing ones of spirited class games. We who have heard Mother Dammann and knew Pat give ardent testimony to the splendor of truth in charity.

Margy is a perfect companion because she can adjust her pace-setting strides to whatever tempo is desired. On her own though, she never seems to "light"—whether it be Nurses' Aide, a shopping spree, or a letter to the Navy that is spurring her on at the moment. There are intricacies of math and chemistry to probe for long hours, but then there is always interest and energy for the nonsense of Ogden Nash afterwards. Margy gives us a start by being alternately serious and flippant, firm-purposed and capricious. She sped through junior year and came back to fit into the life of '46. '47 has had to say two goodbyes to Margy, but repetition doesn't make it easier.

Mary is a New England Yankee, sir, and mighty proud of it. The sturdiness of elms and rockbound coasts goes with that tall, self-possessed bearing, and the combination inspires confidence. All the simple, homely things of life "up north" were dear to this daughter of Massachusetts. Her essays always had men gathered around the stove in a country store or women baking pies in spacious kitchens. She herself is correspondingly down-to-earth and her friendships are solidly founded on enduring qualities that go with an easy competence in dealing with life. Mary continues a tradition of brave pioneers and genial writers—both of whom enjoyed life to the full.

Mabel can look a demure twelve or a sophisticated twenty any day, and both roles she plays with equal ease, laughing at our confusion. There is a certain elusive quality about her that has a magnet's power of attraction. Perhaps it is the perfect poise that copes with everything from basketball to debating, from hockey to social science. Perhaps it is a certain discreet reserve, or the fierce loyalty with which she defends everyone and everything in whom she believes. Whatever it may be, it wins people and situations to Mabel's side. Success, in no matter what sphere, is built on such a faculty.

Hattie Carnegie had a competitor in Luce, who was the preferred of Dramatic Club and Girl Scouts. She thoroughly enjoys making fun of herself or of other people, and that funny accent, she tells us, is a "despaired" case about which anyone is welcome to tease her. There is a total frankness and friendliness about Luce which allows all of us to benefit by the valued intuition of the French mind.

Sue and music have become practically synonymous in our minds. It is only natural, for when we hear a piano played with the arresting technique of an expert, when a new composition or harmonization is produced in our midst, when the organ accompanies our chant classes—the same person is behind it all. Who could forget those airy melodies from The Maker of Dreams? Sue is an artist, but she has the artisan's approach to life. Everything is handled with a steady skill and dexterity, with no hint of unbalanced temperament. Whether she be tired after a day of practice teaching, or beginning the afternoon with bridge and a relaxed smoke, there was the same even disposition which made affection constant.

Do you want to know the history of some unusual saint? Or are you wondering where to get the best reproduction of one of Dürer's pictures? Nancy can tell you. Maria Rosa Zeno

E. de M.

That Zeno specialty of song with a zip came back to us this year. Junior days were drearier without it, but it was fitting that one of the strong notes in our underclass prelude should return in the senior finale. Maria Rosa's name has a lilt that makes everyone join in the chorus calling her to the phone, and the person herself has the same power of captivating. There is a nonchalance about her, but with that Latin temperament it hints at smouldering fires. She is a mimic of the first order, and those eyes keep pace with her words, often getting far beyond verbal expression. Madrigals, and all Manhattanville, are sorry Maria Rosa is leaving.

Junior Class

Now that we are almost seniors we can look back on our college career with a more accurate perspective, and realize that these past three years have been "good years". We found our perfect warden in Mother Morgan, whose humor-bright guidance brought us through so many undertakings successfully, from the freshman Waltz Dream to junior term papers.

It was on Mother's initial note of "doing things together" that the entire class expended time and talent with a free hand on the sophomore vaudeville show. Many days of many weeks found the Charlestown Butler polishing up his steps and the sextette "strolling in the merry, merry month of May". Before the air of the nineties had fully blown past, Serenades were upon us. Wisps of lyrics drifted through the following months, and then came the finale—the goodbye to our heroines, our senior sisters. It was sad and lovely.

This year we welcomed freshman sisters with memories of the timidity and wonder that we brought to Manhattanville on first arrival. Then they won us with their own delightful charm. Charley's Aunt occupied our dramatic talent before long. At the performance we laughed as long and heartily as anyone.

Such feminine things as trousseau talk and showers brightened the blustery winter. Bobbie Daley's visit to New York meant a gay gathering in the gym Lounge with '47 congratulating our first bride and the wedding took bridesmaids and guests off to Boston in a flurry of colorful gowns and gay bonnets. Before quiet had been restored, the magic words "Jerry is home" spread to explain Jo Kolb's abrupt disappearance from the campus scene. A Winter wedding with all the beauty of shimmering white and rich reds followed soon. Ray and Jerry were unofficially included as members of the class of '47.

Skiing weekends and shorter trips squeezed into any free moments were popular January Jaunts. How proud we were of Ethel's Snowbird medal! Someone's entire wardrobe was always being dried after a suitcase's encounter with a snowdrift, and appropriate cartoons appeared on the bulletinboards.

Spring came and hurried along on a full program of term papers and the pleasant moments of leisure that followed each deadline. At last the Tower was to press, and the juniors breathed a long, long sigh of relief.

We have laughed with the sophomores and given all our affection to freshman sisters, yet now as goodbyes approach, it seems we will miss the seniors most. We have known them longest. For ourselves, we are grateful for the solid unity that characterizes our class and gives companionships a promise of long life. Our eyes are upon next year as the best of four—each of which seemed the superlative until the next came.

Sophomore Class

It doesn't seem very long ago that the Class of '48 told stern "station masters" they were "excess baggage" who knew neither where they came from nor where they were going. It isn't very long ago. Yet in that little while the class has become a group we could not do without. Though still underclassmen, superlatives already belong to them. We have often said they were a "most engaging" class; Ensigns, Misters and Lieutenants made it official with diamonds. Four brides and eight fiancées come from their ranks. With representatives from such far off countries as Japan, Rumania, Greece and Italy, as well as several others, they are one of the most cosmopolitan groups on campus. Freshman year they gave the whole College their first proof of what strong unity can achieve and we shall never forget the Circus, with its caveman, baby elephant, and Patti's genuine Japanese dance. Then came the sudden demand for long sleeved nightgowns, and everyone wondered what "the youth movement" was about, until their dramatic presentation solved the mystery. Lively and full of initiative, the Sophomores take part in all of Manhattanville's varied activities, from the Sunday tea dances and Rehabilitation to the swimming meet, bowling and softball — all of which they led in '45. Overflowing with gaiety and courage, they have a song for every occasion, even if it is only Oh What a Beautiful Morning in exam week. That they can attempt anything and carry it through, we saw in their warm and stirring presentation of Green Pastures, this year. Freshman Class

WHEN we returned to College this September, we found our Freshmen sisters already well versed in the Manhattanville tradition, after a week's orientation at Pius X. With sympathy and pride we watched the spirit in which they flapped long tails and ears and brayed their "Donkey Serenade." It did not take them any time at all after that, to become completely one with the College, bringing to it something especially their own. Those little notes of invitation, acceptance, or simply appreciation, which appear so frequently on upper classmen's bulletin boards, are proof of the extra perfect courtesy which marks them, and which never fails to pleasantly surprise us. Spring brought Reverend Mother's Feast, on which '49 charmed us all with Erminie. We won't soon forget the exquisite scenery, with its flowers and trees, the gay ladies and gallant, red-coated soldiers, and Paddy brilliantly in the leading role, supported by enthusiastic and energetic Freshman talent. It was the first big class performance, and we hope that it is only the beginning of a long series of them. But Freshman history includes many other memories too. There was the eternal triangle between the Blue Room, the gym, and the assembly hall. Upper classmen admired with awe, the competent and cheerful manner in which the extra large number of chairs this year, was disposed of. There were the triumphs in hockey, basketball, and the swimming meet, where solid ability came to the front. And long to be laughed over was the Latin class' version of Julius Caesar. With the mature and friendly leadership of Tish, and the polish Rosemary adds to every undertaking, our Sister class has started on a wonderful career.

IT is easy to remember ourselves as freshmen, yet the time seems remote when we were energetic newcomers, full of wonder and anticipation. We were one with the other freshmen, yet distinct in that we were an innovation at Manhattanville. Our problems were new; their solutions obscure.

Life was a mass of complexities with chemistry formulae to understand, medical terminology to fathom and pharmacology dosages to memorize. But along with our intellectual probings went participation in school sports and clubs, hours in the tea room and hazing days when we were all "blooming idiots".

Never to be forgotten were those first days at the hospital. The deftness of the surgeon's knife, a baby's first breath, the drama of life was our everyday world, a routine, often tiresome, but one which touched our hearts to make us change from what we were to what we aspired to be. There was affiliation and the compelling desire to prove ourselves to outsiders. Then there were dark days when our dream almost faded—but somehow we could never completely relax our grasp of it.

We are three years old, still young. Our uniform, cap, and pin are new ones. We are the realization of someone's ideal, and we have an ideal of our own. The present opportunities for bringing God to those who need and are ready to receive Him do not escape us. We are conscious of a need for us in peace as in war—for us as college-educated Catholic women in the nursing profession. We feel that we have found that of which Philip Brooks speaks when he writes: "Only to find our duty certainly and somewhere or somehow to do it faithfully makes us good, strong, happy and useful men and turns our lives into some feeble echo of the life of God".

Student Government

FOR the synthesis and preservation of Manhattanville's ideals we look to Student Government. Those who compose the organization are at the campus helm, pledged to keep College interests first in heart, yet charmingly able to place themselves first in our own hearts too. Theirs is the delicate task of straddling the fence between authority and comradery, of giving demerits with a smile that wins a smile in return. It is too frequently an unsung office because of feminine perversity which make proctors shriek louder than their charges when quarter to ten comes, which makes so many of us rail against the power we so freely gave. In the burst of glory that follows elections little thought is given the arduous service that stretches before our officers, but it is for them to be aware of it through long, long months. We ourselves are ever aware of loving and thanking them. We can't stop congratulating ourselves on the vision that chose them.

Welfare

WELFARE is our Emily Post. With that poise which comes from assurance it seeks to bring the gracious touches to a collegiate atmosphere of sweaters and long shirts. Too often we were aware only of the censures given for those loafers we forgot to change at dinnertime, or for that precious bit of news exchanged over Britannica in the Library. But Welfare, composed of an equal number of students and faculty members, is not our police force—but rather it is our better self. Through a constant awareness of social graces it keeps us on an even plane of high standard. There can be no deviations from the refinement which we ourselves deem essential to college living which we recognize as something deeper than superficial “manners”—an etiquette based on such qualities of a womanly character as consideration and proper self-respect.

WHEN we returned to College, facing a world at peace, our President proposed a challenge to us, Our Lady had brought us victory; what would we give in return? As Children of Mary, we have tried to make our own Mater Admirabilis, Our Lady of Manhattanville. Under this title, her place is not only in our prayer, but in all the daily activities which constitute our life on campus. This year, our special effort has been to give ourselves in time, and most of all in service. The key word which Reverend Mother Benziger characterized as the truest mark of a Child of Mary. These ideals can only be realized in the world, by our practical application of them "in our own milieu" as Mother Dammann would say. And only then shall we who have reaped from the abundance of others' work, give anew what Our Lady once left to us.

Choir

THE Choir at Manhattanville is founded not only on ideals of artistic perfection; a spirit of whole-hearted giving to God is the very cornerstone of the organization. Under the earnest leadership of Monnie, the Choir this year has been marked by an increased and faithful attendance—part of that total cooperation so necessary to the precise beauty of the Chant. There was full manifestation of the College's vital Liturgical Movement in the "gray dawn" practices and in the triumphant moments of High Masses. The group is keenly eager to spend themselves in outpourings of the Church's love for Christ, and their simplicity about this is typified by Mother Morgan's "Come on now, give your all to God". Among Choir members there is always a lovely awareness that "to sing is to pray".

Catholic Action

THERE can be no life without action, so there can be no Catholic life without Catholic Action. The integrated college program of participation in the work of the hierarchy is then fair omen for a long, vigorous life at Manhattanville. There is full promise too, of a wider scope and a greater strength in the Church's work, for each graduate cannot leave the essence of her college life here on campus, it must go with her into a broader environment. The memory of a child's face as he learns of God, the gratitude of a sick person, these are inspiration for the continuance of Catholic Action throughout individual lives. Mother Dammann's valiant endeavors are clearly traced in this pattern of activities, for it was she who urged us forward to the mission of Christ in the world. It was she who made a bold dream a reality, everyone at Manhattanville engaged in Catholic Action. This portion of her legacy gleams with untarnished lustre.

Glee Club

ALMOST from the moment at Carols when Mother Morgan rapped for attention and quiet descended, it was apparent that "the Glee Club had done it again". We recognized the worth of this year's group back in October when they gave us Bach in all his majesty at Feast Wishes, but we loved them in the new mood of holiday festivity. Then came Spring and new success with "Yeoman of the Guard". Those who knew the "inside story" of shortage difficulties and extra practices that were the prelude to the thrilling opening night paid full compliment to the finesse and humor that marked this group in crisis. The music each member loves has been a strong bond—sensitive, unbreakable, in the Club. There is a touch of triumphant glory about each regular meeting, when voices reach right up to set Arcadia ringing. Kathy and Mamie have been as harmonious a pair of officers as any combination of notes they sang. We'll treasure reminiscent echoes of "The Twelve Nights of Christmas" which put in music the perfect balance of their personalities, Kathy's delicate artistry, Mamie's depth of moving beauty. It is not often that any group has such perfect blend in their leadership and the record of '46 bears tribute to it.

Dramatic Club

THE Dramatic Club has combined long periods of training with brilliant but brief displays of polished talent on presentation nights. Under the skillful direction of Miss Roll and the administration of Sid, the group scored fresh successes with "Taming of the Shrew" and "Mary of Scotland". This year the club was more than a pleasant way of spending several hours a week; it was concentrated study and work born of a desire to perfect "art for art's sake". As a result of their efforts, they gave us performances that spoke of a deep understanding of the theatre. Theirs has been the satisfaction of work well done both by actors and the technical groups who worked in such close co-operation to produce the artistic whole. Mother Keyes may well take pride in the Club's evident craftsmanship which has been polished to brilliant luster this year. The swaggering Petruchio, his tempestuous Shrew and the noble Mary fit well into the theatrical traditions which our thespians honor. We hope some of our actresses may continue to further successes in the dramatic field, but no matter what future events bring, this year's group has given us many hours of pure enjoyment.

Debating Club

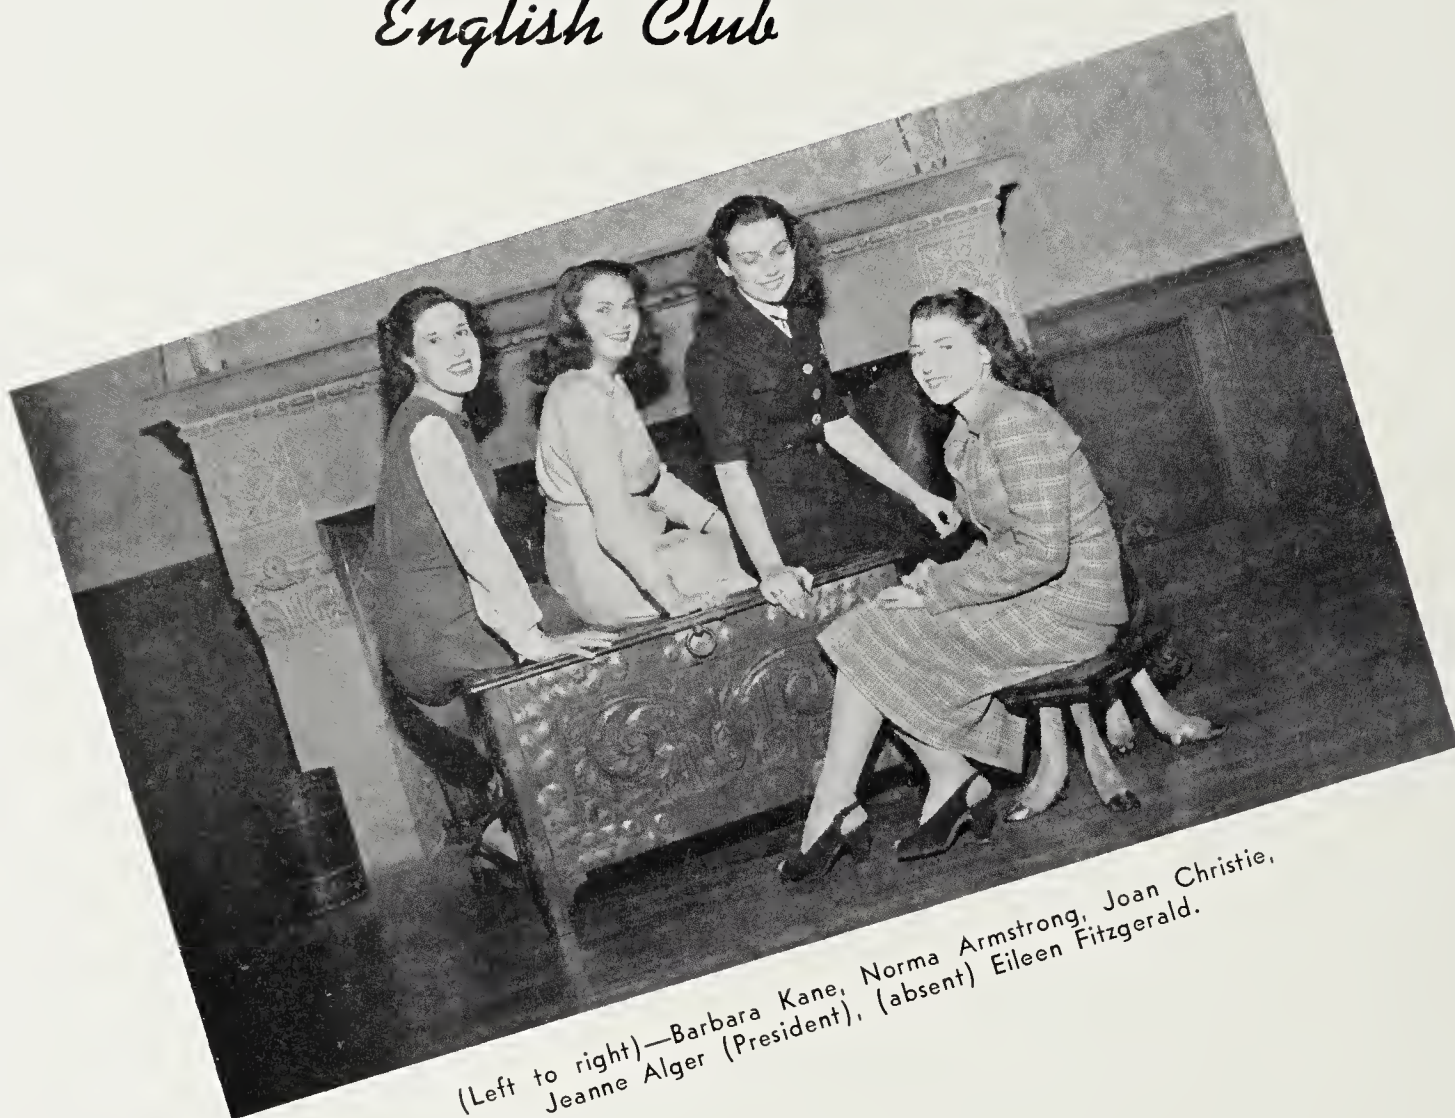

THERE was something of a Jeanne d'Arc's audacity in Debating Club members this year, and a parallel determination to find the right solution to contemporary problems. While impressive delegations throughout the world struggled with U.N.O., Russian difficulties and labor's unrest, our rhetoricians tackled the same questions in the Gym Lounge, and there was bright forecast in the logic of the youth who is to succeed present-day leaders. Morning newspapers and weekly magazines became almost badges, tucked under their arms, and syllogistic training was fully exercised. Our "Big Three"—Mother Tenney, Mr. McClelland and Jacquie—set a brisk pace for the year. Alternate debates and discussions brought all members to their feet, so that Mother Tenney's campaign against "silent members" may be scored as a complete success. Intercollegiate debates sent the club abroad and the annual discussion on campus added our own particular laurels to their collection. In the Debating Club of '46 there was full response to Mother O'Byrne's call for informed, sound thinking on world affairs.

English Club

BYOND term papers and creative writing classes lies the English Club—environs for our literary talent. Mother Williams and Jeanne have succeeded in striking just the right tone at Thursday meetings, easy informality as setting for a stimulating exchange of ideas and expressions. The glow of a fire, the panelled Lounge, the deep chairs and blur of smoke, all go well with the companionship which is the essence of pleasant social communication. Deep insight and lofty resolution set the initial mood this year, and gained expression in Mother O'Byrne's feast wishes with its theme of Peace in Unity. Barbara Kane's moving "Credo" is well remembered. A practical turn led to stress on criticism, but the interest in the abstract brought Catholic philosophy to bear on each article renewed. Gay celebration came with the publication of Bea Hargrove's story in the "Ladies Home Journal". A national award to a former member was thrill enough, but familiar references to "Petit's" on the printed page were even more exciting. We shared our haunts with people across the country; yet we had special priorities. The fun and fellowship of it all will be good to remember; the stimulating help goes with those graduates who seem marked as Bea's successors.

Essay Board

“Two big issues this year” meant a double portion of deadlines and contribution calls. There were those impromptu assemblies to stir literary talent and then came dramatic posters when we tottered on the deadline ledge—“Will the Essay look like this?” beneath a blank page. The unity of our student body was once more manifest in the response which followed announcements. If inspiration only came when the Board became desperate, still the pen did finally take to paper and typewriters began to click. That final weekend overcast by the printer’s shadow always found Second Floor Founder’s in turmoil. People dressed for long-delayed luncheon dates pecked out the last few words of their article while the Board disappeared behind stacks of contributions and glasses of milk. Our Editor was just as likely to be pleading for an editorial idea as reading the book that had to be reviewed. Out of the excitement and pressure though came a good fellowship—and a publication which recognized as good while standing somewhat in awe of our companions whose stories, poems and essays made it. A double branch of laurel to the Essay Board for its double literary achievement.

The Tower

THE Tower has seemed to us a twofold gift—to the graduates as a souvenir of college days, and to ourselves as a cherished remembrance of '46. To this purpose we have tried to make it distinctively the seniors'—gay yet deep as we loved them most. Dark deadline hours clouded weekend horizons, the Gym Lounge witnessed many a Battle of the Adjective and the Bank sacrificed unhurried routines to the academic powers who ruled Board members still must be present at 1:30 classes. Now the gift is ready. We present it hopefully to '46—watching eagerly for the sign of recognition that will say,

"Yes, this is how we were. It's our Yearbook." Where we have succeeded, it was because something of what the seniors were to us has crept in our efforts.

Athletic Association

BLAZERS, red varsity uniforms and the rainbow of class uniform give A.A. the right to be called one of our more colorful organizations. The tang associated with it is due to something more though. There is the exhilaration of a fast game, the thrill of a precise backhand shot, the zest of a close race for a ball, all fitted on the solid basis of perserving teamwork. We may remember the warm fellowship at after-game dinners with the songs echoing from china and silver, but the hours of straining for still better form at practices are equally prized as beginnings of many friendships. A.A. is recognized as an integral part of Manhattanville— by the hapless person who must take gym at 3:30 on a free afternoon by the victorious members of the Varsity. The vibrancy of strong voices and the good feeling of being played out for the team go with the sportsmanship so well expressed in our leaders—Mrs. Klug, Miss Fee, Miss Holland, Sheila, and Ruth. Much of our affection for our college which comes under the heading "school spirit" is incorporated in the athletic program. To those who have put the gym on a par with the library and the Blue Room—our thanks for the balance of physical, mental and social development.

by MAISIE WARD

with 16 pictures by Fra Angelico, many poems in praise of our Lady and a prayer for each mystery by Caryll Houselander. ($2.50).

"To read this book is to have a deeper appreciation of the significance and importance of the rosary. To read it once is to want to read it again, for it makes one know and love Our Lady, and through her Christ and his Church, and it is never tiresome to grow in thought and love of God."

A Statement of Policy . . .

MANY times this year the demand for reservations has exceeded the capacity of even this large hotel.

Much as we regret having to decline to take care of our friends at times, we will not jeopardize the BARCLAY good will by accepting more guests than we can serve in the BARCLAY manner. We think our friends will understand and approve this policy, even though it may sometimes call for suiting their schedules to our facilities.

If we at the BARCLAY had been willing to reduce our standards of service, we could have accepted more guests and, incidentally, could have made more profit.

But with such lowered standards it would not be the BARCLAY, known to thousands of our friends as "the BARCLAY family."

We want you to know that when we accept your reservation you can count on coming to the BARCLAY—and the Barclay is worth waiting for.
